

Hi, here are your markets for the weekend!

the Vintage Market Guide

Hi there,

May is going to extremes this year. This week feels less like late spring and more like August, the kind of heat that empties the cafés and fills the market squares. But markets and stalls will be popping up this weekend anyway, across all seven regions, from the Romandie to Ticino, and the calendar is properly full.

A handful are worth a special look. Les Puces du Vallon in Lausanne marks ten years on Sunday with its 10 ans des Garages anniversary edition. On Saturday, the annual LägereBräu Fäschtbank-Flohmarkt takes over the brewery yard on Wettingen's Klosterinsel, one of the more atmospheric settings of the year. And Winterthur doubles up the same day: the Floh- und Trödlermarkt fills the Altstadt while the Versa Vintage Market opens just down the road, proper vintage curation and old-town wandering in one trip. Sunday brings the Grosser Flohmarkt Thun at the Panorama-Center.

TVMG - Market Diaries

Rapperswil flea market, yesterday morning. Rapperswil is always worth a visit: right on Lake Zurich, with its lakeside promenade, sailing boats and motorboats set against the old-town skyline.

The 6th Foire à la Brocante de Porrentruy, yesterday on Pentecost Monday. A small Jura town near the French border, on a late-May day that already felt like August. Porrentruy has something distinctly French about it, while still feeling very much of the Jura.

And a quick look behind the scenes: we're building a virtual TVMG scout on WhatsApp, designed to answer all kinds of questions about Swiss flea markets, brocantes and vintage events. 'Anything on this weekend in Aargau?', 'Where can I find mid-century furniture this month?', 'When is the next Mellingen flea market?'. Ask in any of the four languages, the scout reads the question, checks the guide, and replies.

Build-in-public moment: three names made the shortlist. Patina (the texture of time, the material trace), Mira (the lookout, the watcher) or Atlas (the friendly map-keeper). Which feels right?

Hit reply to this email with your favourite. We'll share the result in a future newsletter and let you know when the scout is ready to chat. Should be in the next few weeks!

Until next week,
