

🇨🇭 50 years, 40 years and a premiere: 43 markets this weekend

the Vintage Market Guide

Hi there,

43 markets are on the calendar this weekend, spread across seven regions. Three very different stories stand out this time: in Saignelégier a market celebrates its fiftieth anniversary, in Buchs-Werdenberg another looks back on four decades, and in Wetzikon the very first edition of the indoor flea market opens on Saturday.

On 10 September 1976, the Groupement franc-montagnard opened the first Jura brocante and antiques fair in the Halle du Marché-Concours in Saignelégier. This weekend the Brocante de Saignelégier returns there for the fiftieth time. From Friday to Sunday it is all about antiques, brocante, vintage and design. We will of course be there, and we are very much looking forward to it.

Further down you will find a reel on the history of the brocante, with material from the archive of co-organiser François Bouille: newspaper cuttings, old posters and photographs from the past fifty years.

The Floh- und Antiquitätenmarkt Werdenberg in Buchs has a long history of its own: for 40 years it has been part of the events calendar in the St. Gallen Rhine valley. The anniversary edition itself was back in May. This Saturday brings the next regular one, from 8:00 to 16:00.

The Wetziker Hallenflohmarkt, by contrast, is brand new. Its very first edition runs on Saturday from 8:00 to 17:00. Around 45 stalls are announced, and since the market is held in a hall, the weather makes no difference either way.

In Thun on Saturday there is also the Curvy Flohmi, from 11:00 to 16:00, a great address for anyone looking for second-hand fashion in larger sizes.

And on Sunday, from 8:00 to 16:00, the Floh- und Antiquitätenmarkt Mellingen takes place in the middle of the medieval town on the Reuss. We were there in spring, and here you can see what we found.

Further down you will find, as always, all 43 markets of this weekend sorted by region.

TVMG - Market Diaries

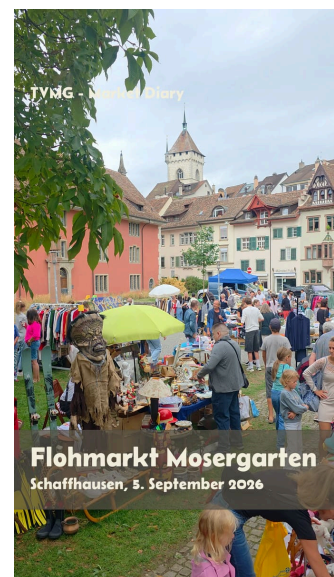

Brocante du Château L'Isle: Grass under tall trees, a long pool in front of the castle and, between them, a brocante you stroll through rather than hunt. Real dealer stock, the kind you expect from Swiss Brocante: antiques, mid-century ceramics and glass, colourful lamps and furniture, plenty of room between the stands and the shade of the trees on a 33 degree day in September. The next edition runs from 3 to 5 September 2027.

Flohmarkt im Mosergarten: Just below the old town, by the Museum zu Allerheiligen, lies the Mosergarten, a small park where a flea market is held once a month. Not a big anonymous affair, but a proper, easy-going flea market, well attended and with a bit of everything, and the Munot above the rooftops. The next and last edition of the season is on Saturday 3 October, 8:00 to 16:00.

Watch the reel →

Versa Vintage Market: Not a flea market but a vintage and second-hand clothing market in the middle of Winterthur's old town, with ten to twelve sellers, carefully chosen clothing and a few vintage finds in between. And all of it in the Rathausdurchgang, an atrium laid out until about 1874 expressly as a public room for the town, with versa. coffee & vintage right next door. The next date has not been announced yet.

Every market gets its own page

A week ago the website thevintagemarketguide.com went live. The database has been growing daily ever since, and alongside it we are building the next part of the Vintage Market Guide!

So far everything is sorted by date. You see what is on this weekend, click on a market and land on that one edition: with opening hours, a map, pictures and, if we have been there, our Market Diary. For the question “where can I go on Saturday?” that works well.

But you ask yourself other questions too. What is this market actually like? When is it on next? And what is happening near me? A calendar can only partly answer that, because there every market first appears as a single date.

That is why every market now gets its own page. Not the individual edition, but the market itself: all upcoming dates at a glance, plus everything we know about it. Pictures, practical information, the things that make it special and our Market Diaries stay findable there even when no new date has been set.

You can already filter by region. But a Grossregion quickly covers several cantons, and the calendar mainly shows you what is coming up next. On a canton or town page you will be able to see which markets exist there in the first place.

436 markets from 24 cantons are now recorded in the Vintage Market Guide! We are building this piece by piece and will show you the first new pages as soon as they are ready.

And if something occurs to you that absolutely has to be on a market page, just reply to this email. We read every response.

Until next week,

Your Vintage Market Guide Team
