🍂 This weekend: Nachtflohmarkt, the Bürkliplatz finale & 29 more markets!

the Vintage Market Guide

Hi there,

The clocks have gone back, the days are getting colder and shorter, and the evenings are drawing in… yet there are still 31 markets taking place across Switzerland this weekend! 🍂

The weekend kicks off with something a little different: on Friday evening, the Nachtflohmarkt at Kammgarn in Schaffhausen opens its doors at 6 pm for an evening of flea market browsing, with a DJ, a bar and hot dogs.

On Saturday, it's time to say goodbye to a Zürich favourite: the Flohmarkt Bürkliplatz takes place for the final time this season and won't be back until spring. We were there for the season opener in May and filmed our Market Diary. Now we've come full circle.

There are more markets to explore in eastern Switzerland on Saturday, too: the Flohmarkt St. Mangen in St. Gallen and the Floh- & Antiquitätenmarkt Werdenberg in Buchs SG, a market that's been running for 40 years!

In Bern, Saturday is all about fashion: at the Curvy Flohmi Bern at Bruder Klaus, you'll find second-hand women's clothing from size 44 up, with coffee and cake on the side.

Sunday is All Saints' Day, a public holiday in many Swiss cantons. But there's still plenty to discover: the Strandgut Flohmarkt in Lucerne, or two flea markets in Thun, the Grosser Flohmarkt and the Flohmi Thun Edition.

Just outside Lucerne, in Rothenburg, the Kofferraum-Flohmarkt Ace Cafe Luzern is another Sunday favourite. From 8 am to 3 pm, sellers set up beside their cars, with all sorts of second-hand treasures to discover. We visited in September and filmed a Market Diary, which you'll find further down! 🚙

Meanwhile, La Chaux-de-Fonds is celebrating a special anniversary: the Bourse suisse d'horlogerie marks its 50th edition! Around 50 exhibitors gather at the Musée international d'horlogerie with historic watches, clocks and watchmaking treasures.

November also gets off to a promising start for collectors, with the Spielzeug-, Auto- & Modellbahnbörse (toys, cars and model railways) in Neuhausen am Rheinfall, the Spielzeug- & Puppenbörse (toys and dolls) in Zollikon, and the 10th Vinylbörse in Wald ZH.

Not a bad way to start November! ❤️

TVMG - Market Diaries

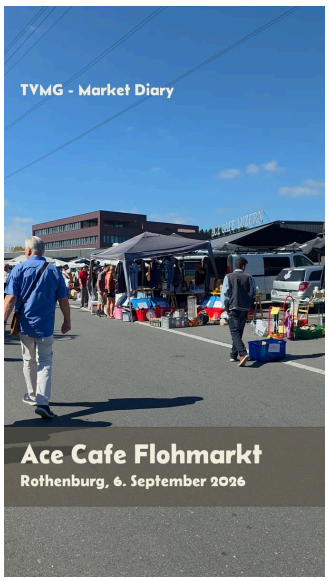

Traditioneller Floh-Antiquitäten & Sammlermarkt Sargans: A grey, rainy Saturday morning in October and a busy market hall: in Sargans the name says it all, a traditional antiques and collectors' market with rural antiques, enamel signs, ceramics and curiosities, and no clothes or mass-produced new goods. Our favourite piece was a large enamel sign from a Viennese fig coffee company, over 120 years old according to the dealer, and afterwards the barley soup from the festival kitchen was just perfect.

Züri Brocki Nights: Open a door, the next room, up the stairs to the bar: the second Züri Brocki Night took place at the Brockenhalle Tigel in Zürich's Seefeld, a rambling house full of small rooms where you almost feel as if you're at someone's home. Families browsing, friends at the bar and the Blaskommoden with song, accordion and tuba: more of a house party than an ordinary evening sale.

Kofferraum-Flohmarkt Ace Cafe Luzern: An industrial estate full of flea market treasures. On selected Sundays, the grounds around the Ace Cafe Luzern in Rothenburg, usually a meeting point for motorbike, car and classic car fans, turn into a lively car boot sale with crockery, old toys, tools, vintage pieces and curiosities. Anyone who wants to sell packs the car in the morning and simply turns up without registering, so every market looks a little different... and that is exactly part of the charm!

Over 100 markets since April 🥂

This week we had something to celebrate: over 100 markets since April... and every one of them was a little different! We were by the lake in Romanshorn, Lutry and Nyon, on village squares in Amriswil and Saanen, in the castle courtyards of L'Isle and Werdenberg, in parks, halls and on small neighbourhood squares. Early on Sunday mornings, on long summer evenings and, by now, in autumn rain again. And all of that across 18 cantons!

What never stops delighting us: how different markets can be. And that is exactly why we go ourselves. A date, a place and a few opening hours tell you very little about how a market really feels. We want to get to know the markets, talk to the people, look more closely and share our impressions with you in the Market Diaries.

On Instagram, we've gathered some of these impressions in a little look back. Here you can find the whole carousel with all the photos.

And now we simply want to say thank you. ❤ To everyone who organises these markets, sets up their stalls in wind and weather and welcomes us so warmly. And to you, for reading along every Wednesday!

Here's to the next 100 markets!

Until next week,
Your Vintage Market Guide Team
